TOOK CYANIDE OR STRYCHNINE

Jacob Wagner Ended his own Life According to Verdict of Coroner's Jury after a Thorough Investigation of Facts.

That Jacob C. Wagner came to his death by taking cyanide of potassium or strychnine is the opinion of the coroner's jury and others who viewed the body and made investigations concerning the death of the man whose lifeless body was found in a woods near Bonneauville Monday evening. From the condition of the body it was evident that he had been dead several days.

After Squire Sneringer, acting for Coroner Woerner, and a jury had learned all the facts in the case and had consulted with Dr. Lindaman of Bonneauville and Dr. H. M. Hartman of Gettysburg they returned a verdict declaring that "Jacob C. Wagner came to his death by taking a poisonous acid."

The physicians believe that the fatal poison was either the quick acting and deadly cyanide or else strychnine. The bottle which was found by his side did not contain headache powders as was first supposed by residents of that section but contained white powders evidently of the same sort as that which caused his death. It was not thought necessary to have these analyzed in order to determine their nature or to go to the expense of having an analysis of the contents of the dead man's stomach made for the same purpose, death evidently having been caused by poison and the nature of the poison being of rather little value.

The bottle which contained the poison had evidently just been opened and the pocket knife found nearby had evidently been used to get out the cork. Little importance is attached to the empty aconite bottle found near Mr. Wagner's home though he may have taken some of that poison also. Where Mr. Wagner procured the drugs is not known. The aconite bottle bore the label of a New Oxford druggist but he remembers nothing about having sold it to Mr. Wagner. The suicide had lately been in Baltimore and it is probably that he bought the cyanide or strychnine there.

The funeral will be held on Thursday morning at ten o'clock with interment at St. Luke's church.

LARGE AUDIENCE HEARS LECTURE

Samuel M. Bushman Lectured in College Chapel on his Trip around the World. Many Astonishing Experiences Related.

For an hour and thirty minutes our distinguished fellow townsman, Samuel M. Bushman, held the rapt attention of a large audience in Brua Chapel Tuesday evening while he lectured on his "Trip around the World." In presenting Mr. Bushman, Dr. Granville cautioned his listeners not to depreciate local talent. Dr. Granville stated that it was of eminent interest to hear a man who had traveled with such keen attention to detail as had Mr. Bushman.

Mr. Bushman prepared his audience to understand the importance of such a trip by giving statistics concerning the provisions used aboard ship. The statement of the amount of liquid refreshment used in this connection elicited great surprise. After mentioning the stops at Madeira and Gibraltar the lecturer carried his hearers to the port of Ville Franche and described Monte Carlo. "Here," he said, "people are required to enter in full dress or other appropriate clothes. We were met by the Governor of Monte Carlo and shown through this greatest gambling place on earth."

At Cairo after ascending the pyramid, "a risk that 90 per cent. of the people declared they would never take again," said Mr. Bushman. "Twenty eight others and myself were granted an audience lasting forty five minutes with the Khedive of Egypt." This is some distinction, seldom accorded the ordinary traveler. "In commemoration of the event the Khedive presented each of the visitors with a coin minted 4600 years B. C." As evidence of this Mr. Bushman exhibited the coin.

At Bombay, the lecturer said this party was entertained at the Taj Mahal, Colombo, Calcutta, Rangoon, Manila and other cities were visited and notable receptions given the tourists. But the premier event was an entertainment to 175 of the party by Prince Ching in Canton, China. "This function," Mr. Bushman said, "was held by reason of an edict issued by the Dowager Empress to Prince Ching ordering him to entertain the Americans." While delivering a talk upon the Gettysburg Battlefield at Canton Mr. Bushman suffered severely from cracked lips, which affliction was observed by some of the prominent Chinese present. As a result of this and as a token of their appreciation, a number of these prominent men presented Mr. Bushman with a beautifully inlaid box containing camphor ice.

Mr. Bushman next spoke of the Japanese cities describing principally Tokyo, "a city of 4,000,000 souls covering an area of 25 square miles."

The talk was concluded by short descriptions of the narrowly averted accident in Honolulu harbor when, Mr. Bushman's friend, the pilot of the Cleveland dropped dead as he directed the boat to the dock, and the reception at San Francisco. During the course of the lecture Mr. Bushman expressed regret that a paper sent to The Times with an account of the wonderful reception at Canton, had been mislaid or lost at this office.

A silver collection netted a nice sum for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid Society of the college. After the lecture articles of unusual merit, gathered by Mr. Bushman during his trip, were exhibited to the admiring crowd.

WEDDING BELLS RING MERRILY

Lewars—Singmaster Wedding at Home of Dr. and Mrs. Singmaster in Gettysburg. Barnes-Bacon Wedding in York.

LEWARS—SINGMASTER

Miss Elsie Singmaster and Mr. Harold S. Lewars were married at one o'clock this afternoon at the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Singmaster on Seminary Ridge, the ceremony being witnessed by the family and a few friends.

The wedding took place in the parlor on the west side of the Singmaster home and Dr. Singmaster performed the ceremony. Ralph P. Lewars, of Philadelphia, played the wedding march.

The bride and groom were unattended. Miss Singmaster wore a gown of white crepe meteor trimmed with princess lace and silk ball fringe.

Among the guests present from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Singmaster, of Palmerton; Mr. and Mrs. John Howard Singmaster of Macungie; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Singmaster of Haddonfield N. J.; Paul Sirgmaster of Quebec; Miss Katharine Howe Miss Pillsbury and Miss Jenny, of Cambridge Mass.; Mrs. Lewars and Ralph P. Lewars of Philadelphia; Miss Annie Lang of New York; Samuel B. Meisenhelder of York; Mrs. Ella Weaver, Macungie; Dr. and Mrs. A. K. Steck of York; Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Steck of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewars will be at home in Harrisburg where Mr. Lewars is engaged in teaching music.

BARNES-BACON

Miss Bessie McCormick Bacon, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. W. F. Bacon, York and Wilson Finney Barnes, that city, will at six o'clock this evening be married at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. John Ellery Tuttle, D. D. Miss Bacon is well known in Gettysburg, having visited frequently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Schroder. Lewis Emmun Root, of New York City, will be the best man; Miss Edna Barnes, a niece of the groom, will be flower girl; Messrs J. Kerr Bacon and Dr. E. V. McConkey will be the ushers, and the wedding march will be played by Miss Marjorie Boher, of Shippensburg. A reception will follow the wedding, and the bride and groom will leave on a trip to Atlantic City and Boston.

WHAT THEY WANT

The Lincoln Memorial Commission by a close vote on Tuesday decided to recommend to Congress the design for a memorial to Abraham Lincoln submitted by Henry Bacon, a New York architect. The Bacon design, already approved by the Commission of Fine Arts, calls for a rectangular marble structure surrounded by Doric columns each 40 feet high, not unlike the Treasury building, except that there is to be only one story.

The statue of Lincoln, designs for which are yet to be submitted, will stand on a pedestal at one end of the structure. On one wall will be Lincoln's Gettysburg address, probably in bronze, and on the opposite wall his second inaugural address.

The memorial will stand in Potomac Park south of the White House on the same straight line as the Capitol and the Washington Monument. Congress already has authorized an appropriation of $2,000,000 for it but the money has not been actually appropriated.

Russell Pope, another New York architect, was the only other competitor whose design was considered at Tuesday's meeting.

LOCAL INTEREST IN TITANIC LOSS

Wife of Lutheran Missionary Returning Home with Three Children. All Saved in Midnight Transfer to Life Boats.

Many Gettysburg people are keenly interested in the welfare of four passengers who were on the ill-fated "Titanic" which sank in mid-ocean Sunday night. All four were saved and the news of their safety was received here with much gratification. They are Mrs. A. O. Becker and children Ruth, Mary and Richard.

Mrs. Becker is the wife of Rev. A. O. Becker, one of the missionaries at the Lutheran mission at Guntur India where the Rev. and Mrs. S. C. Burger of Gettysburg are located together with a large number of other people well known in this place. Rev. Mr. Becker has been ill for some time and was not even able to go with his family to the boat. Mrs. Becker was returning to America on account of the ill health of one of their children.

Neither Mr. Becker or his wife is known personally to local people but their work at the India mission has been a matter of interest to the large number of Lutherans in this section and through this means they are widely known. They were originally from Ohio and neither was educated here though Mrs. Becker, as well as her husband, is a college graduate.

When the work of rescue was begun Sunday night the woman and her three children were among those placed in the life boats. They drifted about all night until they were picked up Monday by the "Carpathia" which came to the rescue following wireless summons for help from the "Titanic."

IDAVILLE

Idaville, April 17—Preaching services will be held in the Evangelical church Sunday morning by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Barker.

Mrs. Emma Webb and daughter, Hela, spent Thursday in Carlisle.

Mrs. Jennie Groupe and Mrs. Etta Sidesinger attended the funeral of Mrs. Lydia Weaver in Bendersville on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Miller and daughters, Alice and Junetta, and Mr. and Mrs. Pentz and children, of York, were recent visitors at the home of N. L. Groupe.

Mr. and Mrs. William Miller and daughter, Irene, of York Springs, spent Sunday with Mrs. Leah Groupe.

Mrs. L. C. Groupe Mrs. W. H. Koehenower and Mrs. N. K. Hoffman and son, Stuart, spent Thursday in Carlisle.

GEISER COMPANY MAY

LOSE ITS IDENTITY

There is a probability that the Geiser Manufacturing Company may lose its individuality which has made it so distinctively a Waynesboro institution directed solely by Waynesboro men; a big enterprise financed chiefly by Waynesboro capital and an industry which belongs essentially to Waynesboro.

There is now on foot a project to form a consolidation of half a dozen or more agricultural implement companies into one big company with a capital stock of $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, one of which companies is to be the Geiser Manufacturing Company.

The matter has been under discussion for some time and options on the purchase of their stock are now being solicited from the stockholders. Many of the latter have given the options asked.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the company it was unanimously resolved to enter into negotiations through W. H. Coverdale, New York City, for the formation of a large implement company. The companies to be included in the new company are these: the Geiser Manufacturing Company, Waynesboro; the Emerson Brantingham Company, Rockford, Illinois; the Minneapolis, Minnesota; the Olds Gas Engine Co., Lansing, Michigan; Reeves and Co., (threshing manufacturers), Columbus, Indiana; and several smaller companies.

WANTED a middle aged woman to do housework on a farm. Apply Mrs. Stewart Sites, R. D. 2, Fairfield.

FINE cabbage plants received fresh daily from the green house. Cremer, florist.

CORN fodder for sale, five cents a bundle. John Shindeldecker, route 4, Gettysburg.

FIRST class barber wanted. Apply R. C. Walter, Biglerville, Pa.

FINE tuberose bulbs that will bloom, 40c per dozen, after Tuesday. Cremer, florist.

DRUMMER BOY TELLS STORY

Drummer Boy in Battle of Gettysburg Tells of his Experience here. Met Brother in Opposing Army at Hagerstown.

Marshall C. Dunn, a drummer boy in the Battle of Gettysburg, and for many years an engineman on the Northern Central railway, and who was recently placed on the retired list on a pension has had a career of unusual interest. Mr. Dunn is now living in Baltimore and tells an interesting story of his experiences here, saying:

"Yes, I was a drummer boy at Gettysburg. My family was living at Savannah, Georgia, when the war broke out and, being unionist at heart, we moved at once to the North. That is, all but my brother, who for business reasons remained behind. The war broke out, means of communication were cut off and my brother was forced to join the confederate army, where he afterward became Colonel A. C. Dunn.

"Then came the same old story. He was on one side and I on the other for although I sympathized with the South and the southern people, I believed in the union of the states lay this country's salvation. We met at Hagerstown—be in gray, and I in blue. I heard his corps was there, and, as I was much younger than he, I walked several miles from where we were encamped to see him. Being such a youth I was passed through the lines without much trouble. He gave me a royal welcome; we have always been fond of one another. We talked of our family and our friends 'way into the night. I then left for the union camp, he seeing me safely through the lines.

"If I should live to be a hundred years old, I shall never forget Gettysburg. I was too young to realize the danger of my position and enjoyed leading the army into battle. You see, the drummers marched at the head of the soldiers until nearly into action, when we dropped to the rear. I was in General Slocum's corps. We saw a good deal of fighting.

"I shall never forget the scene at Culp's hill. Each year I pay a visit to Gettysburg, and as I sit there on the soft green grass amid the well-kept park it seems as a horrible dream to me. Were it not for the monuments all about I would think it the result of a vivid imagination; these prove it a grim reality.

"It was hot at Gettysburg, fiendishly hot. As we marched the dust rose in clouds, feet grew sore and weary, we choked for water and longed for just a moment's rest. Then the battle! No one who was not there can realize what a fearful thing it was, what a fearful thing war is. How I got through it safely I do not know. Men fell all about me; men whom I had laughed and joked with a few hours before; men who had shared my bed and board for many weary days.

"But the most terrible time, to my youthful brain, was when the battle was over and the dead lay piled upon one another on the flats about Culp's hill. The ground was thick with them—youth, life and blood were almost nothing. Men died like ants when kerosene is poured upon them. Soldiers like any other wounded men do not die silently and without suffering. Some lay there during the hot, still night calling for water, for their comrades, and some calling for death which would not come. I cannot think of it without pain; I cannot talk of it even now.

"I was enlisted for three months, and was discharged after Gettysburg, as my time was up. It was then I started on the railroads, carrying prisoners for exchange, hauling soldiers to guard bridges, for the horror of war is increased ten fold when there is no means of communication by train. Therefore the bridges were carefully guarded night and day.

"Since then my life has been a rather peaceful one. Outside of several minor accidents—the one in which I lost my leg and one in which my fireman was blown out of the cab by an explosion—nothing of much note has occurred."

WILL REBUILD DAM

At a recent meeting of the Conewago Milling Company, plans were submitted by C. F. Moul, for the rebuilding of the dam, at Waldheim, along the Big Conewago, which was partially destroyed by high waters and floating ice, several months ago. The contract for the reconstruction of the dam, was awarded to Mr. Moul who contemplates starting on the work with a large force of hands early in May, and expects to finish it in about ten days. The construction will be similar to that of the York Haven Power Plant and will be made of concrete formation.

1341 PERISH WHEN TITANIC IS WRECKED

Carthia Picked Up 868 Persons.

ONLY ONES RESCUED

Other Ships Reached Scene of Disaster Too Late.

MANY NOTABLE MEN MISSING

Most of Those Saved Are Women and Children.

New York, April 17.—The appalling magnitude of the wreck of the giant liner Titanic has been but little mitigated by the fragmentary information which has so far filtered in.

The Titanic struck the iceberg off the Newfoundland banks at 10:25 Sunday night and went down at 2:20 Monday morning. She sank in water two miles deep.

The rescuing steamer Carthia has 868 survivors on board, according to the latest news received at the offices of the White Star line in New York. This increases the list of those saved by about 200 from the number first reported. Except for this, the favorable details are insignificant compared with the supreme fact that the Titanic, a 400-ton liner of the Atlantic, and that the shattered wreck took with her about 1341 victims to their death.

A rigid investigation is to be made into the report that the Titanic was not equipped with sufficient lifeboats and fails to save her passengers and crew. The assertion is made that the vessel did not carry anything like adequate life saving appliances to meet such a disaster as that which overtook her. It is probable that both the British and American governments will insist on a thorough inquiry into this phase of the wreck.

The first reports giving the total survivors at 675 were varied by more favorable news, first from Captain Rostron, of the Carthia, who gave the number at about 800 and later by the positive announcement of the White Star line that there are 868 survivors of the Titanic on board the Carthia. But with these revised figures there remain 1341 persons, passengers and crew of the Titanic, who are unaccounted for and apparently lost.

Hope clung desperately to the belief that the steamers Virginian and Parisian, of the Allan line, might have picked up survivors in addition to those on board the Carthia, but this was practically dispelled when the Sable Island wireless station reported that the Parisian had no survivors on board, and when the officers of the Allan line in Montreal issued a statement that the captain of the Virginian had sent them a wireless message saying that he had "arrived at the scene of the disaster too late to be of service." Both the Virginian and the Parisian therefore appear to hold out no hope of further reducing the extent of the calamity. The Virginian has proceeded on her way to Europe.

The Parisian steamed through much heavy field ice looking for passengers from the ill-fated ship. No life rafts or bodies were sighted among the floating wreckage, which covered a large area. The Parisian reports that the weather was cold and that even if any persons had been on the wreckage they would in all probability have perished from exposure before they could have been picked up.

The Carthia, having on board the only survivors accounted for, is coming in slowly to New York. All hope for details of the tragedy and its effects are centered on this ship. She will reach New York some time during Thursday night.

London, Paris and New York are griet stricken and overwhelmed by the news of the disaster. Tens of thousands of relatives and friends of passengers on board the Titanic thronged the steamship offices in all three cities, waiting hour after hour for news that, more often than not, what it does come means bereavement and sorrow.

Of the survivors on board the Carthia by far the larger number are women and children.

Prominent Men Lost.

It is practically certain now that nearly all of the men of the Titanic company went down with the ship when she plunged two miles toward the ocean floor, or that they perished miserably while clinging to wreckage or life preservers in the icy waste that betrayed them. They gave up life within sight of the little, rocking boats that held their women and children. It cannot be doubted now that among these were Colonel John Jacob Astor, Isidor Straus, Major Archibald W. Butt, aide to President Taft; George D. Widener, of Philadelphia; Karl H. Behr, the tennis champion; Jacques Futrelle, the writer; William T. Stead, the London editor; Francis D. Millet, the American artist, and many, many more who were known on both sides of the Atlantic. The toll of the Titanic's dead will be felt the world over.

Captain E. J. Smith, commander of the Titanic, probably went to his grave with his ill-fated vessel without once being able to communicate direct with the agents of his line. Aside from the "S. O. S." sent by his wireless operator, not one word from him was received up to the time the Titanic sank, but foremost into the ocean.

The presumption is that he met his death while at his post as a gallant skipper.

That he and his crew faced the rigidly unwritten law of the sea—women and children first—is plainly indicated by the preponderance of women among the partial list of survivors that the wireless has given.

Although rated as one of the most able commanders since the advent of the modern steamship, Captain Smith's career had been recently marred with ill luck. He was in command of the Titanic's sister ship, the Olympic, when that vessel was in collision with the British cruiser Hawke. Exonerated of all blame for this occurrence, he was placed in charge of the Titanic, only to graze disaster when his new charge fouled the steamship New York in the Solent after leaving Southampton.

Although 868 souls are reported to be on the Carthia, it is apparent that all of them are not passengers, for it was necessary for members of the Titanic's crew to man the lifeboats which set out from the sinking liner. How many of the crew were assigned to each boat is a subject of conjecture. A similarly unsettled point is the percentage of first class passengers among those saved. While the names of survivors obtained are largely those of saloon passengers, the rule "women first" should apply equally to the second cabin and the steerage, a regulation which may have cost the life of many prominent men above decks. It is natural also that the names of the more obscure survivors would be slower in reaching land.

Olympic Sent Terrible Tidings.

The tidings that the Titanic had sunk came in a brief wireless dispatch to Cape Race, N. E. from the White Star liner Olympic, which reported that the Titanic had foundered at about 2:20 a. m. Monday morning, in latitude 41° 16' north and longitude 50° 14' west. The message added that the steamship Carthia, then on her way to Naples, had reached the scene of the wreck at daybreak and found only the Titanic's boats were accounted for and about 675 souls saved, crew and passengers, latter nearly all women and children.

A wireless dispatch received at Boston, which was relayed by the Olympic from the Carthia, stated that the Carthia had 868 of the Titanic's passengers on board, mostly women and children, closing with the words: "Grave fears are felt for the safety of the balance of the passengers and the crew."

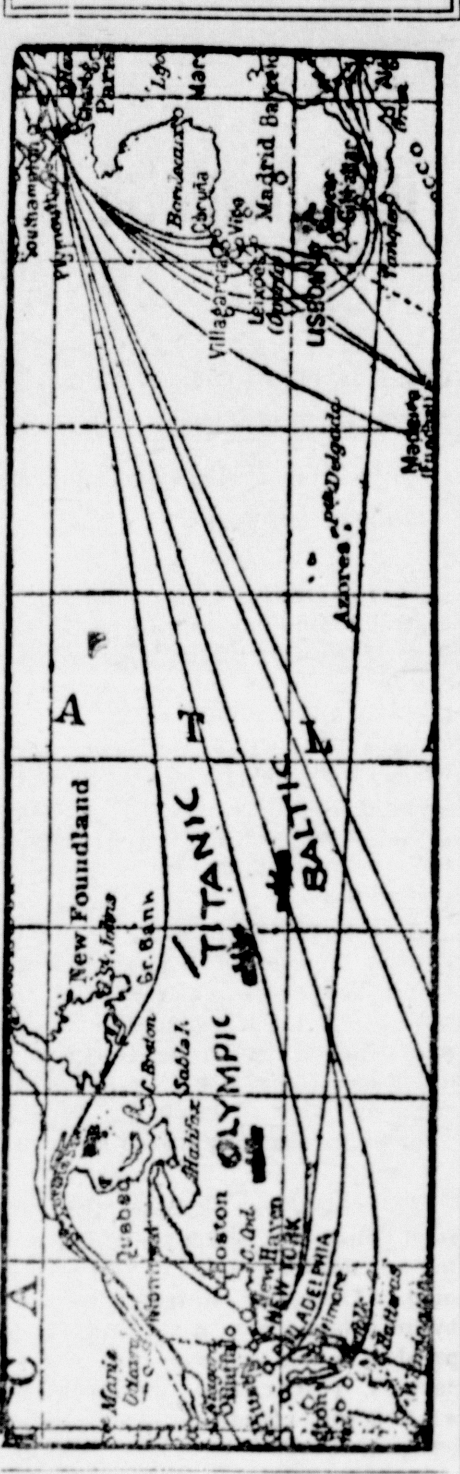

The brief wireless dispatches received so far show that the passengers and crew passed through thrilling experiences from the very moment that the great Titanic crashed into the iceberg, several hours later, reached the Carthia, several hours later, reached the scene and rescued the survivors. From lifeboats floating in a sea of ice, the collision occurred at a time when most of the passengers had retired or were about to go to bed.

When the Titanic struck she struck hard. There was something more than a rending and tearing of bow plates, a bowing of a few forward compartments. The Titanic must have recoiled from her destroyer a shattered, given ship. So tremendous an impact should have crumpled up the vessel, splintered, shaken the mighty engine from their foundations, opened up the watertight compartments, buckled the plates from end to end and started rivers everywhere.

It is likely that water rushed into her hull from all sides, for her keel must have been injured by the terrific drive on a mass as hard as rock. That far must have quenched the ship's lights by injuring her electric apparatus. We know that the wireless worked weakly when Phillips, the operator, set about his desperate task of reaching out for help while the women and children in the boats were off somewhere in the dark and the men waited with sinking hearts. The wireless ceased muttering in less than two hours. A butler or two and it was gone.

The shock of the collision sent many of the passengers to the decks partly dressed. A wireless dispatch came through Campden, N. S., saying that the passengers were ordered to the lifeboats at once and that many were scantily clad as they took their places in the boats. This would indicate that the Titanic's condition was such that no time could be spared to return to their staterooms for additional clothes.

Ice Menaced Lifeboats.

Danger still confronted even those who were so fortunate as to be put aboard the lifeboats. Huge quantities of field ice covered the ocean, a wire less dispatch says, and in the darkness the crews had to guide their boats with the greatest care to prevent being jammed and overturned. The ice was so heavy that the lifeboats could not force their way through it, and as a result the boats became widely separated.

The air was biting cold, and the chill that rose from the ice floes caused the passengers to huddle close together to keep warm. All through the night the lifeboats bobbed helplessly between the shifting cakes of ice, while the survivors prayed for the dawn to come.

Shortly after 2 o'clock the sinking Titanic made her great dive into the sea, carrying with her hundreds of persons to death.

Daylight came and with it arrived the Cunard liner Carthia, which found only the score of lifeboats filled with crew and passengers floating helplessly about the vicinity where the Titanic had passed under the waves.

First reports were that the Carthia had saved but 675 persons. The new figures reduced the list of those for whose fate fear was felt by nearly 200, and if as seems probable, practically all those saved were passengers, it would appear that all but approximately 450 of the vessel's passengers are accounted for. A partial list of the survivors received from the Carthia includes the names of many women of prominence who were on the steamer:

A Terrible Scene.

After the first desperate calls of the Titanic for help had been sent flying through space and brought steamers for hundreds of miles around speeding to the scene, what seems to have been an impenetrable wall of silence was raised between her and the anxious world. The giant liner, so far as advice, appeal, went to her fate with out so much as a whisper of what must have been the scenes of terrible tragedy enacted on her decks.

In the lack of even a line from a survivor, imagination pauses before even trying to conjecture what passed as the inevitable became known and it was seen that of the more than 2000 human lives with which she was freighted there could be no hope of saving, as it appears, far less than the half.

Other than the news that 868 persons, largely women and children, had been rescued from the liner's boats by the Cunard Carthia, several hours passed without a word as to the fate of the remainder of those on board at the time of the fateful crash. Along the entire Atlantic coast wireless instruments were attuned to catch from any source the slightest whisper of hope that possibly on one of the many steamships which rushed to the assistance of the stricken Titan of the seas were other survivors of the sunken vessel. But from none of the ships reported to be at or near the scene of what, viewed in the light of the probabilities may be recorded as the world's greatest marine horror, came the slightest syllable of encouragement to the anxiously waiting world.

The $10,000,000 Titanic, with cargo and jewels, worth perhaps $10,000,000 more, is a total loss.

NOT HEARD FROM

The following prominent persons are among the Titanic's missing passengers:

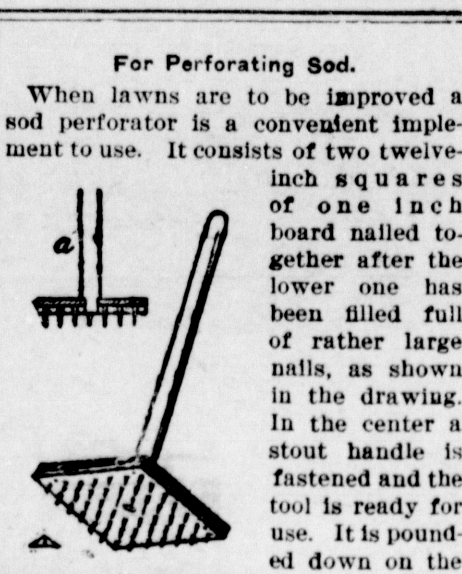

Colonel John Jacob Astor, of New York, capitalist and society leader.
George D. Widener, of Philadelphia, capitalist.
Harry Elkins Widener, of Philadelphia, son of George D. Widener.
Benjamin Guggenheim, of Denver, Colo., capitalist.
Henry B. Harris, of New York, theatrical promoter.
Jacques Futrelle, of Scituate, Mass., writer of fiction.
Isidor Straus, of New York, merchant.
Major A. J. Butt, U. S. A., aide to President Taft.
Francis Millet, American artist.
William T. Stead, of London, Eng., publicist and editor.
William Roebing, 2d, of Trenton, N. J., wire manufacturer.

SOME OF THOSE SAVED.

Among the prominent persons who were saved are:

Mrs. John Jacob Astor, New York, bride of John Jacob Astor.
Countess of Rothes.
Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon, British baronet.
Lady Duff-Gordon, wife of Sir Cosmo Duff-Gordon.
J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star line.
Mr. and Mrs. Frederick M. Hoyt, of New York.
C. M. Hayes, president Grand Trunk railroad, of Canada.
The following persons from Philadelphia were saved:

Mrs. George D. Widener, of Lynnewood Hall, Elkins Park, and her maid, Emily Geiger.
Mr. and Mrs. William E. Carter, of Bryn Mawr.
Miss Lucille Carter and Master William Carter, children of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Carter.
Mr. and Mrs. John B. Thayer, of Haverford. Mr. Thayer is second vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad.
John B. Thayer, Jr., young son of Mr. and Mrs. Thayer.
Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, of Haverford.
Miss Susan and Miss Emily Ryerson and Master "Jack" Ryerson, children of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ryerson.

For Perforating Sod.

When lawns are to be improved a sod perforator is a convenient implement to use. It consists of two twelve-inch squares of one inch board nailed together after the lower one has been filled full of rather large nails, as shown in the drawing. In the center a stout handle is fastened and the tool is ready for use. It is pounded down on the lawn just before seed or fertilizer is to be sown. Each blow makes a lot of small holes, into which the seed and the fertilizer are washed by the next rain, thus preventing loss.—American Agriculturist.

Has Your Horse the "Shivers?"

A horse with the "shivers" is a mighty uncomfortable creature and is always an easy victim to the influenza bug. Perhaps the stable is damp or drafty. More likely it is lacking in ventilation and no purifying rays of sunshine reach its interior. In such case the stock breathe over and over again the same air, their blood becomes starved for oxygen, and the circulation is impaired.

Larger Posts Are Best.

The Ohio experiment station in some tests to determine the durability of farm timbers found that large posts usually last longer than small ones of the same wood. It makes no difference, says a report received by the department of agriculture, which end of the post is put in the ground, except that preference should be given to the sounder or larger end.

Cultivating the Orchard.

A good method of cultivating an apple orchard is to plow very shallow early in the spring as convenient and then keep harrowing at least once a week, according to weather conditions, until the first or even the middle of July. Then seed the land with crimson clover or some other good cover crop.

COURT UPHOLDS FULL CREW LAW

The Act of 1911 is Found Constitutional.

LIKE WESTERN DECISIONS

Dauphin County Court Refuses Injunction to the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Harrisburg, Pa., April 17. — The Dauphin county court decided that the Pennsylvania full crew law, approved by Governor Tener on June 19, 1911, is constitutional.

The court refuses to grant an injunction to restrain the state railroad commission from enforcing the act, as prayed for by the Pennsylvania Railroad company in an action in equity filed last fall.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company brought the action to test the constitutionality of the act, setting forth that the commission was about to enforce it, and that if it was carried out it would result in great losses having to be paid by the company in case it was disregarded.

The railroad contended that the act was unconstitutional because of the great cost entailed by its operation; that it was not a proper exercise of the police power of the state, and that the section providing for exits, guard rails, steps and heating equipment on mail and express cars was not germane to the act, not being mentioned in the title.

The Dauphin county judges follow in their decision the lines of the decisions of the Indiana and Arkansas courts, which have been upheld by the supreme court of the United States.

In addition to analyzing the act and deciding the constitutional questions, the court passes on twenty-nine requests for findings of fact and nine requests for conclusions of law, filed by the plaintiff, and nine requests for findings of fact and eleven requests for conclusions of law, filed by the defendant, the state railroad commission for whom Attorney General John C. Bell appeared, James Scarle appearing with him as representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, the organization instrumental in getting the bill through the legislature at its last session.

The court remarks, in the opinion that the proceeding was somewhat irregular, as no violation of the act had occurred, the court being asked to pass on the validity of the act before any case had arisen under it.

"It is by no means certain that our equity jurisdiction extends to this length, even the allegation of the bill that the penalties, if enforced, would be oppressive and confiscatory and result in a multiplicity of suits, does not conclusively suggest a right to equitable relief," says the court. "Accumulated penalties could only result from numerous violations and they, to whom the legislative mandate is addressed, could be oppressed only by their own persistence."

His Chance.

"He has a grudge against the plain people."

"On what score?"

"Says they wear so many rubbers that it forces up the price of tires."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MUCH MAIL IS LOST

7,000,000 Lost When Titanic Goes Down—1,600,000 Are Registered.

New York, April 17. — Postmaster Edward M. Morgan stated that the White Star liner Titanic had on board 3423 sacks of mail. It is not likely he said, that the mails were saved.

As the standard ocean mail bag holds about 2000 letters, it is estimated that in all about 7,000,000 pieces of mail matter have been lost.

Of the 3423 bags in the hold of the Titanic about 200 bags contained registered matter. Postmaster Morgan said that those sacks contained, on an average, about 8000 letters each. He estimated that approximately 1,600,000 registered letters and packages had gone to the bottom.

OPERATORS AND MINERS NEAR PEACE

Work in Mines May be Resumed on May 1st.

New York, April 17.—A continuation of the conference of the sub-committee appointed by the anthracite operators and miners in Philadelphia last week was held at the Union League club.

President White, of the mine workers, stated that the negotiations between the sub-committees were progressing satisfactorily, but that it probably would be several days before any definite conclusion, which could be presented to the full committee, would be reached. He said there was every indication that a settlement could be reached.

Mr. White insisted, however, that the union must be recognized.

It is said that the operators will agree to recognize the union only to the degree that they will make the union officers a party to the wage contract.

The union representatives are doing their utmost to bring about an agreement that will be approved by the mine workers. The date of holding a ratification convention will be determined as soon as the sub-committee has completed its labors.

All indications point to a resumption of work in the anthracite mines by May 1.

PREMONITION OF DISASTER

Mrs. Peter C. Hanson, of Racine, Wis., Among Titanic's Missing.

Racine, Wis., April 17. — "I dread taking this trip to Denmark, for I have a feeling that I will never return alive. I just know that the boat will sink or something awful happen to me," said Mrs. Peter C. Hanson, numbered among the passengers on the ill-fated liner Titanic to her brother, Thomas Howard, of Racine, before she kissed him goodbye.

Mrs. Hanson, accompanied by her husband, sailed last February on a visit to his old home in Denmark. They were on their way home on the Titanic. Their names do not appear among the rescued.

Mrs. Daisy Grace's Case Continued.

Atlanta, Ga., April 17. — The case against Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace was again continued when she appeared in court to answer a formal charge of shooting her husband, Eugene H. Grace, with intent to kill. It was set for next Tuesday. The action was the result of an agreement between counsel. It was announced.

SNAPSHOTS AT CELEBRITIES

Victor Rosewater, Acting Republican Chairman.

Victor Rosewater of Omaha, acting chairman of the national Republican committee, is editor and proprietor of the Omaha Bee. Before the death of Chairman John F. Hill Mr. Rosewater was vice chairman, and his advancement was according to precedent. He will remain at the head of the committee until his successor is elected at the national convention at Chicago. He is also a member of the executive committee of the national committee and of the committee of arrangements for the national convention. He is a strong Taft man.

Mr. Rosewater is a native of Omaha and is forty-seven years old. He began his newspaper career in Omaha on the Bee in 1895 and since 1906 has controlled that publication. He became active in national politics when he was sent as a delegate at large to the national Republican convention of 1908. At that convention he was elected a member of the national committee, subsequently becoming its vice chairman. Mr. Rosewater is a member of the advisory council of the National Civic Federation and of the American Economic association.

Abbreviations.

Representative William Kent of California has framed and hanging up in his office an envelope that he regards as noteworthy for the abbreviated address it bears. The envelope was addressed:

"Rep. Kent, House Rep."

Kent's envelope reminds one of a letter received by President Taft not long ago from a western man. It opened up as follows: "Mr. Pres. Taft, Wash. D. C. Dear Pres:"

Underwood's Campaign Manager.

Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama, who has been active in politics, both state and national, since the close of the civil war, is a busy man these days. He is chairman of the campaign committee that is booming Representative Oscar W. Underwood for first place on the Democratic ticket in the coming presidential campaign. Recently he expressed the belief that Mr. Underwood is growing in strength as a presidential candidate and that the outlook for his success at Baltimore is encouraging.

A native of Alabama, Senator Bankhead is a civil war veteran, having served four years in the Confederate army. After the war he served in the state legislature for several years and then went to Washington as a member of the Fifty-third congress. He served nine full terms and then was beaten for re-election by Richmond Pearson Hobson of Spanish war fame. This turned a stroke of luck for Mr. Bankhead, for in June, 1917, he was appointed United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John T. Morgan and was soon thereafter elected for the full term. Senator Bankhead is seventy years old and is a farmer.

Didn't Like Farming.

Former Governor Patterson of Tennessee was making a speech in an agricultural community in that state. "I wish to remark at this juncture," he said, "that I differ from most people who address the farmers in that I do not say I was born on a farm or that I wish I had been born on a farm. As a matter of fact, I can't think of anything that I would care less about doing than living on a farm."

Propriety.
Not long after the expulsion from Eden, Eve saw Adam digging in the ground with something.
"What is that implement?" she inquired.
"That? Why, that's a spade!" replied Adam, thinking no wrong.
Whereupon Eve blushed violently. "O, mercy!" she cried, and averted her face. In other words, it was long enough after the expulsion for the sense of propriety not only to have come into being, but to have gained considerable headway as well.—Puck.

To His Personal Knowledge.
Desk Sergeant—What did you put that fortune teller out of business for?

Police Inspector—She's a humbug. I tried to find out from her what had become of the diamond pin I lost the other day, and she gave me the wrong steer.

NO SPEEDING.

MEDICAL ADVERTISING WORTH MORE THAN MONEY

Here is an instance where a few words of advice by a friend helped more than a gift of $1000 would.

Mrs. H. Hartmann, who lives in Albany, N.Y., who was in bad health for years and is now strong and vigorous says in a letter

"I was in a run down condition for about five years until this spring, when I learned what a good tonic and strengthener Vinol is. It is certainly the best tonic I have ever used and it has done wonders for me."

It is very important for all who are not feeling just right, to build up their strength this spring by taking our delicious cod liver and iron remedy without oil, Vinol.

There is no better time than right now, for Vinol enriches and purifies the blood and creates new strength. People who have troublesome coughs, no appetite, can't sleep, find Vinol exactly what they need to build them up. We guarantee Vinol to satisfy you and will pay back your money if it does not. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

Good-Bye Catarrh

HYOMEL Quickly Clears Stuffed Up Head and Stops Snuffing and Hawking

In the morning, shortly after you awake, dear reader, do you have to hawk and strain to get that stubborn piece of mucus out of your throat?

Get rid of catarrh now; it will grow worse as you grow older. One day of breathing pleasant, healing HYOMEL (pronounce it High-me) the guaranteed catarrh remedy, will give such wonderful relief that you will wonder why you doubted the statement that HYOMEL would end the most aggravating case of catarrh. Remember HYOMEL does not contain any cocaine, opium or other habit forming drugs.

A hard rubber indestructible pocket inhaler and a bottle of HYOMEL costs $1.00. This is called the HYOMEL outfit. If one bottle does not banish catarrh, you can get another for 50 cents at The People's Drug Store and druggists everywhere.

SLEUTH HAS VERY HARD JOB

Is Going to Ask the Legislature to Pass New Law Making Burglary Capital Offense.

Policeman McCarthy of the Union Market station, saw three men loitering in the vicinity of Goldstein & Millinger's jewelry store on the East side at three o'clock in the morning. "Aha!" he says, "I'll sleuth some." And he did. He hid in a doorway. Soon he saw two of the men boost the third over the front transom.

"Aha!" says he, "I'll pinch 'em." But he didn't. The two fled, leaving the third inside the store, making a most careful inventory of the stock, as is done by all burglars in the best sets.

"Come out'r there!" ordered McCarthy, but the burglar merely hoisted his hand to a position at right angles with his face, placed his thumb against his nose, and wiggled his dexter fingers—a most uncompromising position.

"Come in and get me, yer big stiff," he finally muttered.

"That I will, me bucko, and 'twill be no ladylike reception you'll receive when I make your acquaintance," muttered McCarthy. The robber's fingers continued to sway back and forth.

McCarthy got a box and tried to climb over. He couldn't reach the transom. The robber advised him to get a ladder. So McCarthy got a barrel and put his box on top of it. Thus he managed to reach the transom. The burglar encouraged him.

"You're doing fine, you big stiff," he remarked.

"You'll be doing finer when I reach reach you," puffed McCarthy. Then he tried to wriggle in, as the burglar had done. The robber was voluble with advice. "Move a little to the left, fatty," he jeered. "Keep on coming, or wait until I get some grease and oil your sides."

Thus encouraged, McCarthy came through until he was amidship—and then he stuck, for no human being ever said McCarthy was sylphlike. The robber got busy. He collected nice little missiles (like lumps of coal) and bombarded the wedged-in McCarthy.

"Come on; yer doin' fine," he jeered.

There was a supreme effort, and with a mighty "Oof!" McCarthy wriggled through and, like a ton of bricks, landed upon the little robber.

Charles Schwartz, much battered, is held on a burglary charge, and McCarthy is going to ask the legislature to pass a law so he can be sent to the electric chair.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Unreasonable Woman.

Although much has been said and written on the subject, we do not yet realize how desperately lonely a woman can be in a thinly settled farming community. Probably no one can ever realize it except the woman herself.

They had taken Seth Hodgkins' wife to the state insane asylum. The day after she left him, Seth—who had been a good husband to her from the date of her tin-wedding anniversary to the date of her silver-wedding, and through all the intervening anniversaries—which there had been no parties to celebrate—received a visit of condolence from his nearest neighbor, two miles away.

Seth turned from a sink piled high with dirty dishes, to clear a chair for his guest.

"I shall have to hire more help. It seems as if she had been gone a year," he said.

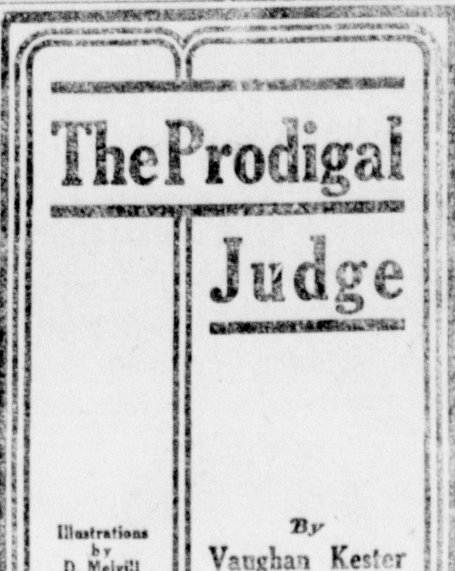

"I always supposed that Harriet enjoyed good health," said the sympathizing friend.

Harriet Hodgkins' husband looked in dazed and futile inquiry from the sprawly pattern on the bright new oilcloth that she had bought with the carefully saved egg-money to the view from the kitchen window, a wide, snowy field, some tall, funeral evergreen-trees and a patch of darkening sky. The kitchen did not face the road.

"I cannot understand," he said, "what ailed Harriet. She has hardly been out of this kitchen for fifteen years."—Youth's Companion.

How It Turned Out.

"I told that dub he was foolish to be courting so many girls."
"How did it turn out?"
"As you might expect. His expenses were so heavy that he got behind with his board and had to marry his landlady."

CHAPTER I.—The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Quintards, is the subject of discussion by Jonathan Crenshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and Bob Yancy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hazard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his appearance. Yancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.—Nathaniel Ferris buys the Barony, but the Quintards deny any knowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep Hannibal, Captain Murrell, a friend of the Quintards, appears and asks questions about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.—Trouble at Scratch Hill, Yancy's home, when Hannibal is kidnapped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's agent. Yancy overtakes Blount, gives him a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER IV.—Yancy is served with a warrant for assaulting Blount. Yancy appears before Judge Slocum, and is discharged with costs for the plaintiff.

CHAPTER V.—Betty Malroy, a friend of the Ferrises, has an encounter with Captain Murrell, who forces his attentions on her. Yancy, Murrell's agent, Carrington, who threatens to whip the captain.

CHAPTER VI.—Betty sets out for her Tennessee home. Carrington takes the fancy stage. Hannibal disappears, with Murrell on their trail. He overtakes them in the mountains of Tennessee. Murrell's agent, Carrington, and stabs him in a fight that followed. Hannibal escapes in a canoe.

CHAPTER VII.—Hannibal arrives at the home of Judge Slocum Price.

CHAPTER VIII.—The Judge recognizes in the boy, the grandson of an old time friend. Murrell, the Judge's home. Hannibal hears of the finding of Yancy's body. Price arrested as counterfeiter.

CHAPTER IX.—The Family on the Raft.

That would unquestionably have been the end of Bob Yancy when he was shot out into the muddy waters of the Elk river, had not Mr. Richard Keppel Cavendish, variously known as Long-Legged Dick, and Chills-and-Fever Cavendish, of Lincoln county, in the state of Tennessee, some months previously and after unprecedented mental effort on his part, decided that Lincoln county was no place for him.

Mr. Cavendish's paternal grandparent had drifted down the Holston and Tennessee; and Mr. Cavendish's father, in his son's youth, had poled up the Elk. Mr. Cavendish now determined to float down the Elk to its junction with the Tennessee, down the Tennessee to the Ohio, and if need be, down the Ohio to the Mississippi, until he found some spot exactly suited to his taste.

With this end in view he had toiled through the late winter and early spring, building himself a raft on which to transport his few belongings and his numerous family.

Thus it happened that as Murrell and Slocum were dragging Yancy down the lane, Cavendish was just rounding a bend in the Elk, a quarter of a mile distant. Leaning loosely against the long handle of his sweep, he was watching the lane of bright water that ran between the black shadows cast by the trees on either bank.

He heard a dull splash, and caught sight of some object in the eddy that swept alongside. Mr. Cavendish promptly detached himself from the handle of the sweep and ran to the edge of the raft.

It was a face, livid and blood-streaked. Dropping on his knees he reached out a pair of long arms and made a dexterous grab, and his fingers closed on the collar of Yancy's shirt. He drew Yancy close alongside, and pulled him clear of the water. Mr. Cavendish began a hurried examination of the still figure.

"There's a little life here—not much. Polly!" he called.

This brought Mrs. Cavendish from one of the two cabins that occupied the center of the raft. When she caught sight of Yancy she uttered a shriek.

Her cry had aroused the other denizens of the raft. Six little Cavendishes, each draped in a single garment, tumbled forth from their shelter.

"I reckon we'd better lift him on to one of the beds—get his wet clothes off and wrap him up warm," said Polly.

"Oh, put him in our bed!" cried all the little Cavendishes.

concern when he thought of the child. Then—there was a scarcely audible rustle on the margin of the woods, a dry branch snapped loudly. Next a stealthy step sounded in the clearing. The judge had an agonized vision of regulators and lynchers. The cautious steps continued to approach. A whisper stole into the jail.

"Are you awake, Price?" It was Mahaffy who spoke.

"God bless you, Solomon Mahaffy!" cried the judge unsteadily.

"I've got the boy—he's with me," said Mahaffy.

"God bless you both!" repeated the judge brokenly. "Take care of him, Solomon. I feel better now, knowing he's in good hands."

"Please, judge—" it was Hannibal. "Yes, dear lad?"

"I'm mighty sorry that ten dollars I loaned you was bad—but you don't need ever to pay it back! It were Captain Murrell gave it to me."

"I consecrate myself to his destruction! Judge Slocum Price cannot be humiliated with impunity!"

"I should think you would save your wind, Price, until you'd waded out of danger!" Mahaffy spoke gruffly.

"How are you going to get me out of this, Solomon—for I suppose you are here to break jail for me," said the judge.

"Well, Price, I guess all we can do is to go back to town and see if I can get into my cabin—I've got an old saw there. If I can find it, I can come again tomorrow night and cut away one of the logs, or the cleats of the door."

"In heaven's name, do that tonight, Solomon!" implored the judge. "Why procrastinate?"

"First, there's a pack of dogs in this neighborhood, and we must have a full night to move in, or they'll pull us down before we've gone ten miles!"

"You're right, Solomon; I'd forgotten the dogs."

Mahaffy closed and fastened the shutters, then he and Hannibal stole across the clearing and entered the woods. The judge went to bed. He was aroused by the arrival of his breakfast, which the sheriff brought about eight o'clock.

"Well, if I was in your boots I couldn't sleep like you!" remarked that official admiringly. "But I reckon, sir, this ain't the first time the penitentiary has stared you in the face."

It was nearing the noon hour when the judge's solitude was again invaded. He first heard the distant rumbling of voices on the road and passed an uneasy and restless ten minutes, with his eye to a crack in the door. He was soothed and reassured, however, when at last he caught sight of the sheriff.

"Well, judge, I got company for you," cried the sheriff cheerfully, as he threw open the door. "A horse-thief!"

He pushed into the building a man, hatless and coatless, with a pair of pale villainous eyes, and a tobacco-stained chin. The judge viewed the newcomer with disfavor. As for the horse-thief, he gave his companion a misery a coldly critical stare, seated himself on the stool, and with quite a fierce air devoted all his energy to mastication. He neither altered his position nor changed his expression until he and the judge were alone, then, catching the judge's eye, he made what seemed a casual movement with his hand, the three fingers raised; but to the judge this clearly was without significance, and the horse-thief manifested no further interest where he was concerned. He did not even condescend to answer the one or two civil remarks the judge addressed to him.

As the long afternoon more itself away, the judge lived through the many stages of doubt and uncertainty, for suppose anything had happened to Mahaffy!

Standing before the window, the judge watched the last vestige of light fade from the sky and the stars appear. Would Mahaffy come? The suspense was intolerable. Suddenly out of the silence sounded a long-drawn whistle. Three times it was repeated. The horse-thief leaped to his feet.

"Neighbor, that means me!" he cried.

The moon was rising now, and by its light the judge saw a number of horsemen appear on the edge of the woods. They entered the clearing, picking their way among the stumps without haste or confusion. When quite close, five of the band dismounted; the rest continued on about the jail or cantered off toward the road.

emerged from the jail.

"Your servant, gentlemen!" he said, lifting his hat.

"Gitt!" said one of the men briefly, and the judge moved nimbly away toward the woods.

Now to find Solomon and the boy, and then to put the miles between himself and Pleasantville with all diligence. As he thought this, almost at his elbow Mahaffy and Hannibal rose from behind a fallen log. The Yankee motioned for silence and pointed west.

Persuaded to Ride.

Charles Nagel, secretary of the department of commerce and labor, is a tall man, resembling in his build an isolated pine tree on the top of a hill. Returning to Washington one night from New York, he got past the taxicabs and was surrounded by a group of hackmen, to whom he paid absolutely no attention, as he intended to walk the fourteen blocks to his office. The hackmen greeted him with a storm of such cries as:

"JUMP RIGHT IN HERE," INSISTED THE DRIVER.

"Take you right uptown!" "Take you to the New Willard!" "Take you to the Raleigh!"

The statesman walked straight ahead without even looking at his beseggers.

"If you want a cheap hotel jump right in here," insisted another driver. Still Nagel walked on, unheeding.

Finally a Jehu addressed him thus: "Deaf and dumb asylum! Take you up there in a minute!"

At this Mr. Nagel laughed and got into the hack.—Popular Magazine.

Almost a Champion.

Senator Shively of Indiana can tell a story. A coterie of his Hoosier constituents surrounded him in a Washington hotel recently and one remarked, naming a statesman who had failed to secure an appointment for a friend, that the statesman was the biggest liar he ever knew.

"You should have known a man who lived in Logansport," replied the senator. "He was always talking about a fine horse he said he owned, when as a matter of fact he never owned a pound of horseshod in his life. But he talked about it so much that he got to believe it himself—only one day he went to Indianapolis and bought a saddle and bridle!"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.
